All Four-Returned: Four Part Series to Follow

The Thorold Election Post-Mortem Begins

An interesting examination—regardless of whom you voted for.

SHORT READ: 224 body words | approximately 1 minute, plus the schedule, Satire and Opinion Notice, and three satirical illustrations.

Body word count excludes headings, schedule, notices, cartoon text and sign-off.

The UN-FAB FOUR are back and re-elected. Naturally, my election review comes in FOUR parts.

Coincidence? Perhaps. An opportunity too good to waste? Absolutely.

Beginning tomorrow, Thursday, I'll examine Thorold's councillor election: the background, the campaign, the outcome and what residents should watch for next.

This is about understanding how an election becomes the council we live with—and what happens after the signs come down. Expect political commentary, documented examples, some uncomfortable questions and humour. Municipal affairs should not require an anaesthetic.

THE RELEASE SCHEDULE

Article upload times may vary from day to day on www.thoroldelectioncommentary.ca.

Thursday, November 5 — Part One: The Result and the Opportunity
Setting the scene.

Friday, November 6 — Part Two: How the Campaign Worked
Looking beyond the election signs.

Saturday, November 7 — Part Three: A Smaller Council and a Larger Test
What the new arrangement means.

Sunday, November 8 — Part Four: Mission Possible—Putting Thorold First
Bringing the examination together and looking ahead.

Possible Monday, November 9 — Closing Thoughts

The focus is the councillor race, without reviewing the mayoral contest. You don't have to agree with my assessment to join the discussion.

Please share this preview and invite others to follow the series—by email, Facebook, Messenger or even a rotary-dial phone, if you still have one. Sign up at www.thoroldelectioncommentary.ca to receive an email alert when each part—and future articles—is posted.

They will receive a private confirmation email and must accept before receiving article alerts.

Four parts. Four consecutive days. Plenty to consider.

Political opinion and satire. Cartoon scenes and dialogue are invented; see the notice on page 3.

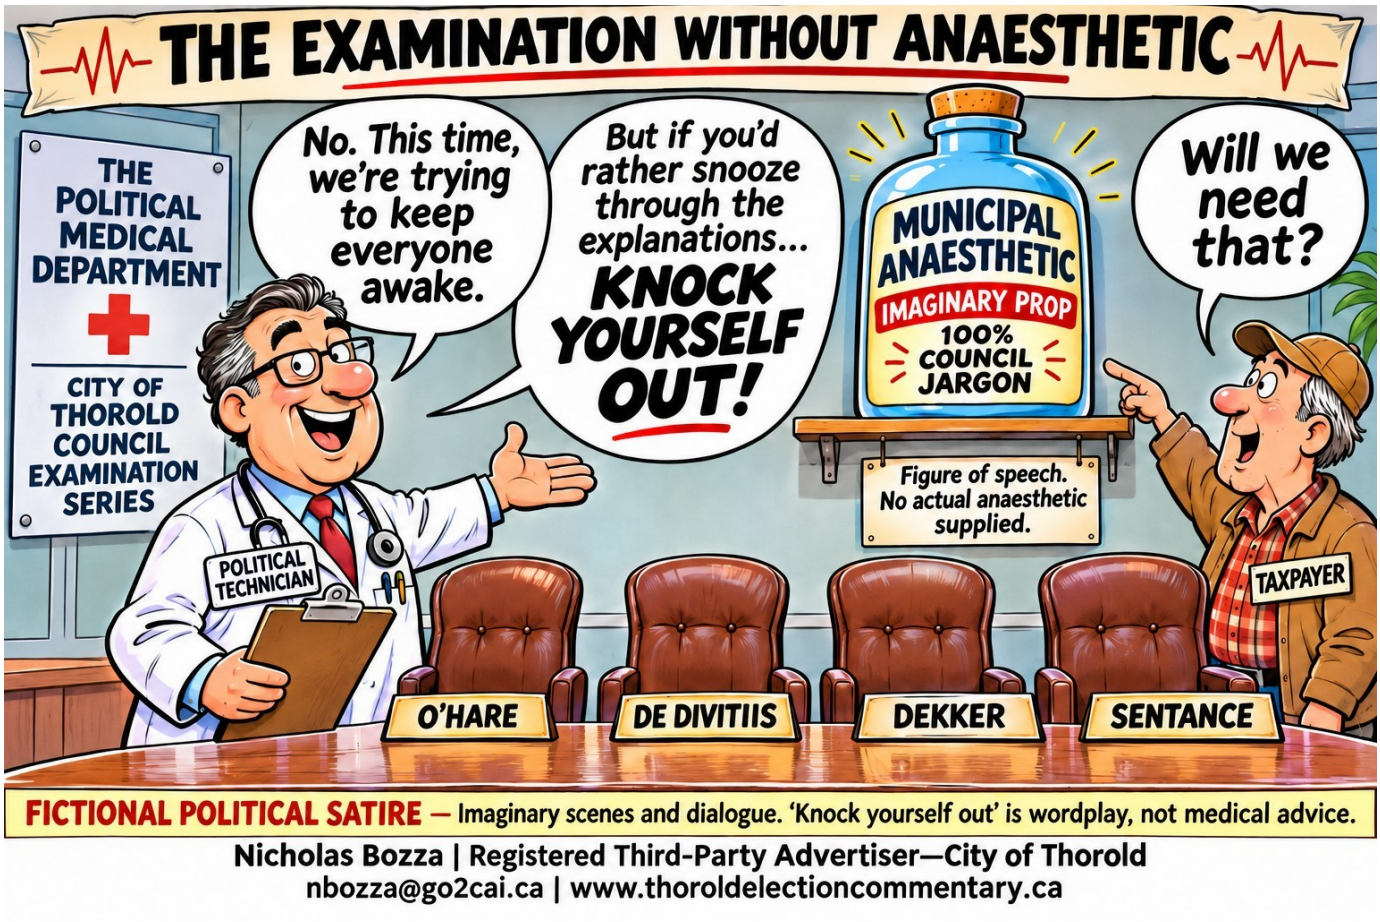

Three satirical illustrations follow on pages 2 and 3.

One part daily — then a closer examination

No anaesthetic required

SATIRE AND OPINION NOTICE

The medical department, political technician, examinations, prescription and anaesthetic are fictional election metaphors. Scenes and dialogue are invented; caricatures are not photographs. "Knock yourself out" is wordplay—not an instruction or medical advice of any kind.

"UN-FAB FOUR" is a satirical label used by the author because some voters use it as an affectionate nickname for Councillors Tim O'Hare, Mike De Divitiis, Nella Dekker and Ken Sentance. It describes a perceived voting alignment, not an official caucus or proof of unlawful coordination. Nicholas Bozza writes independently as a registered third-party advertiser in Thorold. No depicted person's endorsement is implied. This commentary is free; no one is obliged to read it or agree.
